(A) And - - - - - mad

(i) All war depicts the failure of man as a thinking animal. Those who fight war, are forced to give up their humanity and reasoning, just to focus on the victory. The gift of 'Human life' is the supreme pride of man. Thus, putting all virtues & this life in danger, certainly shatters the pride.

(ii) The above/given lines exemplify the use of 'Irony' and Paradox.

The phrase 'grim and Glad' is an example of oxymoron.

- (iii) The men who had gone to fight war and have survived, when return from the battlefield, are seen to be suffering from trauma and various physical disabilities. The fact that the men have become dependent on others, compels the poet to refer to them as children.
- (iv) The survivors are said to be broken and mad because of their injuries from battlefield, their nightmares which terrify them even during the day, their incomplete vengeance, their memories of the brutalities of warfield and the fear which is permanently evident on their faces has stolen them of all senses of normal being.
- (v) The contrasting feelings in the poem are that of a war survivor and a non-combatant. On one hand the poet speaks of their "soon" expected recovery and on the other hand describes the severe impact of war which is almost impossible to overcome.

Thus we may say the poem portrays hope and why this hope is not worth value.

(B) Goodbye ----- sea.

(i) The word 'wave' symbolises the passion, the zest and the energising charm of the love relationship.

(ii) The word Goodbye best describes the theme of the poem, that is about the separation of two lovers.

(iii) 'Wave' changed the desolate sea for a moment with its charm, warmth and passion of the love that resided in the hearts of those two people.

The things not proved scientifically can prove great disasters.

This point has been wonderfully elucidated in the wonderful work of William Wymark Jacobs; the play The Monkey's Paw. The Whites are very eager and curious about the wish-fulfilling Monkey's Paw and thus, buy it from Sergeant Major Morris. Despite of the sergeant's continuous warnings, Mr. White makes a wish for 200 pounds by falling into the grip of his superstitious conscience. No doubt, the money is received, but as a mortgage of their only son, Herbert's accidental demise. Outwardly, they all mocked the Sergeant's story but inwardly, the curiosity was unsatiable. Thus, they could not discard the monkey's paw and had to pay the price - the death of their son. This symbolizes the fact which H.G.Wells very rightly stated in his book,

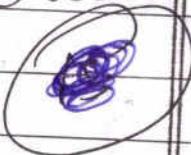

"The Invisible man", that "No matter how educated or scientific a person is, superstitions do not abandon the conscience of man." The only way is prevent it from overtaking your reasoning, which the whites couldn't do.

answer(i) In the lesson, 'What's your Dream', by Ruskin Bond, certain ideals for realisation of dreams are mentioned explicably. The old beggar emphasises that one must be extremely focused and work continuously in the direction of achieving our goals. All distractions on the way must be overlooked and no heed should be paid to the things which risk our concentration. While pursuing our dreams we must be persistent.

and patient. We ought to wait for results and should not expect too much in a short time. Then if we have been honest in our efforts, we shall be suitably rewarded, because Big dreams start from inside, require courage, include mistakes, build character and are achievable.

But, the old wise man added, that we must not be the hurdle of someone else's dream, by intoning the following verse:

Live long my friends be wise and strong, but do not take from any man, his song.

answer (ii) The lesson 'Hum of Insects' by Robert Lynd, talks about the bounty of nature in presence of the various audible beauties. The writer says that the rhythm of wave, birds and insects, echoes in some way, the rhythm of our own breath and blood. Thus, as he speaks of the insects he feels himself drifting to his childhood. The elaborate explanation of the garden, fenced by shrubs, full of variety of flora and fauna and the description of the evening play creates a clear picture of the old times. The explanation of the smile on people's faces, the fact that there were no discriminations in sharing love and the fun of the aunt's visits define the picturesque beauty of his prose. The undeniable realisation that all these things and emotions are not true for the present world, confirms and proves that it has to be the journey to our childhood for such bountiful experiences — experiences which have become memories:

what a hectic schedule I had these few days. Yeah! Never had I imagined that I would perform such a solemn part as that of the Public executioner.

But, well oh! well, anything for Suzanne. It was, of course, her idea that we shall prove ourselves as the best actor. When I decided to act 'Jaques Roux' at Apperville-sous-Bois, I was super confident that there can be no better way to prove myself better than that skinny Quinquaret.

I had prepared a wonderful speech and my audience forgot to clap when I finished. That confirmed the impact I made. But then, I was invited by Marquis-de-Thévenin. Never, in my wildest dreams could I imagine Quinquaret acting as the marquis. I certainly cannot forget the sensations I had when he told me that my wine was poisoned. Now I realize that the sensations I felt were not because of the poison instead they were the result of the "confidence" which Quinquant had in the marquis' eyes. But, no regrets, because it was all done for Suzanne and she certainly deserves the best. There is no denying the fact that Quinquant duped me, well, beyond expectations.

I wish Suzanne and Quinquant, all the very best for their life ahead.

Ha Ha. Dear friend Quinquant, you duped me well! Hats off to you!

answer 11:

Both Dr. Kemp and Griffin were scientists. Dr. Kemp was an aim-oriented man, pursuing all his research to get a fellowship at the Royal Society. He was quiet, respected and non-interfering. While Griffin, was ambitious too, but he aimed at personal gains. It is evident from the story, where on one hand Griffin was eager to attain power and supremacy by terrifying and killing people, Dr. Kemp valued the common welfare and humanity more than fame and money. Griffin was an extremely gifted scientist, but his unbridled ambitions were a threat to society. He confided in Kemp and shared his story in anticipation of his support in his cruel targets of establishing a reign of terror. Whereas, Kemp shared all of his story with colonel Adye in order to stop Griffin from achieving his aims. We may, for a moment, accuse Kemp of cheating on a friend, but we cannot

~~to~~ resist ourselves from lauding his efforts to save humanity.

Both Kemp and Griffin were scientists, pursuing their goals, one was gaining through his hard work, the other met his end due to his immoral ambition.
That is the difference.

letter of Complaint regarding a recent purchase

I have been your customer for a considerable number of years now. I write this letter with a feeling of extreme dejection and inconvenience caused to me due to the malfunctioning of a product within its warranty period.

I purchased a Titan Raga, silver watch from your store on invoice number 7461, dated 6th March, 2017. The watch stopped working within two days purchase. What is more, that the watch continues to make a ticking sound but the hour hand does nothing but point at 6. I took the product to your service centre but to no avail. You must understand the inconvenience I am facing inspite of being your regular customer. Expecting an appropriate and immediate response. Please find enclosed the copy of invoice and warranty card.

WORLD DISABILITY DAY

- Jayanti

The greatest disability in life is a bad attitude. Honestly friends, I find it extremely improper and inhuman to behave with the physically challenged with an air of arrogance. The almighty has made them suffer a disability and they are already under its pain, but why are we, very safe and sound, falling victims to the disability named Bad Attitude?

Everyday we come across the events which enlighten us about the growing insensitivity of the people towards "less Gifted". Yes, that is what I prefer to address them as, because, their disability in no way has ever stopped them. Talk of Deepa Malik, talk of Ira Singhal, think of Arunima Sinha and tell me what have we achieved to criticize them? Friends, it is never our physique which defines us, but our thoughts. Why don't we use our wonderfully working hands & legs for the welfare of those who need us? Why should we hesitate to offer a hand to a blind man crossing the road? Why shouldn't we do our best to make the "less gifted" thank god for our presence in this world?

Yes, God helps those who help themselves and god blesses those who help others.

So friends, this World Disability Day, let us pledge that we'll give up the bad attitude and help those who need us. Because we are the youth and we are the most Powerful.

THANK YOU.

Travelling By Metros

- Parti

One

Someone quoted,

Industrialization is perhaps the most advanced form of insensitive advancement within the coat of inventions. Probably, that is the bitter truth. The nature has been exploited to fullest to bring into being the skyscrapers, the charcoal roads and the beautiful metropolitan cities. But then, if we have made discoveries, if we have invented computers, why not bring it in use? The chaos and traffic, though, is an avoidable drawback of high-tech cities. So, as we know, every problem comes with a solution and here we have it — The Metros. The trains which are swift and run undergrounds, away from the blaring car horns. A man who has to reach the office by 9 am, has the comfort of the speed and calm of the metro.

while he revises his previous day's work and plans the day ahead. Every nook and corner of the metropolitan cities is chained into the Metro Network. The well furnished interiors, the clean coaches, the large space all add to the comfort of travelling and, yet again we say, Science and Technology is a boon for man. Of course, the road traffic is out of talk, but people never overlook the fact that you can jam a metro too! It's all about how we use the benefits provided to us. Undoubtedly, metros have eased our lives in the metropolitans, acting as an antidote to various traffic and time problems.
